night one of the auddent tragedies that has aver occurred at this place was enacted by two boys, Willette Yowels and Willie Llv. eray, aged 10 and 14 respectively. It seems that they in company with some other boys were out playing last Sunday when a boyish dispute arose ovar some trivial matter connected with the play, when probably a hiow or two was exchanged, but was soon eettled and the boys went on with their piny as usual. They met at the grocery store of Walk Newcomb, near the depot, when they made reference to to the little dispute that took place the day before and after talking the matter over for a little while in which neither appeared to get mad, young Vowels stepped to the door and ask ed Livesay to come to him Livesay tollowed and on reaching the door Vowela etrace him with a knife, which afterwards the male persuasion." proved to be a spring back dirk with a blade about three inches in length. Livesay turned and stiempted to pick up something to throw at Vowels eaving, "I will get you," and fell to the linor and expired in tear than a minute. Medical aid was summoned but the hoy was dead some minutes before its arrival. Young Vowela ran home as soon as he did the stabbing. but knew not the extent of his deadly work, Willie Liveray was a son of Hetty Liveray, and was a bright by He was living with the family of D N. Williams at this place Willette Vowels is the next eitest son of J. E. Vowele, one of our most enterprising and respected citizens, who deeply deplores the unfortunate affair. The boy has always been a very quiet lai and many be lieve that he did not alm to cut his com penion, but thought to scare him by pretending that he was trying to cut him, he ing under the impression that the blade of the dirk would allde back into the handle like it had done in many cases before in the hands of different boys about town, who hed been in the habit of playing and fool ing with it. It le believed that he meant to press the spring and allow the blade to elide, but falled to do so and the fatal cut ting was the result. He was arrested and placed under guard and the trial set for Wednesday, and on that day postponed till Friday. Young Livesay was buried Tues day evening.

The dress coat has to earn its living in Alahama. A Mobile newspaper says that at a recent hell a gentleman wore the swallow tall coat in which he was married fif leen years ago, which seventeen other bride grooms had worn and which had done duty at 43 weddings.

The Rose Lie.

A Harrodehurg correspondent furnishes the Courier Journal this account of a wonderful aurgical operation: A man by the name of Haggin had been blown out of a well by the premature explosion of a blast, and wee carried home with his brains oozing from en ugiy wound above the right temple. Dr. Slavine was summoned and immediately had Dr. Tomlineon called in consuitation. It was a serious case and required prompt and bold treatment, for Haggine life was last chbing away. A small portion of the skull was removed anti about a teaspoonful of brains, bloody and bruised taken out. At this juncture the operation for the time ceased. The doctors were in a dilemma in regard to what to fill the cavity with. Happily it occurred to one to procure a dog, rob hlm of a portion of his brains and transplant them into Heggin's head. In such an emergency there was no time for discussion and the axperiment was tried at once. A pointer dog was immediately procured, etherized, placed near the patient, a portion of the right side of the skull removed and a sufficient quantity of the dog's brains as carefully and dextrously taken out as could be done with crude instruments at that time, nicely fited into the vacant up and the patient left comfortably easy. As Slavin had suggested the reasedy for the man, Tourlineou then proposed to replace the dog's brains with those of the man which were still lying on the table near. As it was a settled opinion that the dog would die authow, no objection was made and the idea was curried out.

Now comes the most wonderful part of the story, for both justients recovered; the man after a long siege of cereful nursing and the doz without further attention cr trouble. A curious result, however of the change of brains was noticeable in both Haggin and the dog. The canine would never afterward go near a well, but made a regular habit of going every morning before breakfast to a certain Main street barroom, slipping in the back way and winking at the har keeper with hie right eye. Haggin got along all right and fived a long time, but ever afterward, when he came up from Danville and spent several would see a country dog following a farm wegon on the atreet he would bristle up and give a savage and paralyzing growl or hark, and whenever he saw a quail he would stand perfectly rigid, holding up one foot until the bird flow away or was removed.

Women Braver Than Men

I was talking with a dentist the other day, and, much to my surprise, he inform ed me that women underwant dental opera tions much better than men. He said he vanily praferred women petients, because the Adams Express, was here Wednesday. It to what was necessary to be done and -About helf past S o'clock Manday bore the little burte necessary to such operations with greater fortitude. "A woman bas much more endurance," he said. "As eoon as you begin to operate on a man's tooth be begins to fidget and shrink, and every time you touch a tender epot be wants to jump out of the chair. His conduct makes the operator nervous and tired The average woman, however, will sit through a whole afternoon of drilling and filling and hammertog at her teeth like a Major. You are able to do more natinfac tory work for her, and feel less fatigued when you have finished. A female gener ally gives a somewhat to ther scream than a man when she has a too h pulled, but she approaches the forcens more bravely and is not so apt to have the touthsche scared away by the sight of the dentist, as is so often the case with the patient of Extraordinary Matrimonial Swindle Two women, described as English, one a nad Eveline Rappy, the other Lindsey, have been arrested in faris on the charge of matrimonial awindling. It is al'ezed that Lind ay, who was married in France 20 vears ago, was accostomed to advertice in some of the newspapers, offering in marriage a young widow possessing a million france, or "a wealthy girl who hee foat her reputation." To those who took the hilt she produced Rappy, who is 25 years of age, and the latter is said to have visited England with several Frenchmen in ances sion, to have gone through the marriage per-mony, and to have disappeared next day, not only with the wedding presents, but with any jawelry within her reach. Rappy was arrested lu a high class hotel just as she was about to start to England to meet a fresh dupe. She is said to be very handsome, and to have deluded persons oc cupying positions so high that they were nehamed to prefer a compleint. Editorial Thousand-Mile Tickets.

If a fellow has a thousand-mile ticket ou three or four roads he can be away from home half the time, and that is enough for any editor. It is pleasent to know that this vexed matter is settled Some of us have been sweating blood for months and many have practiced walking on the right of wey getting accostomed to the ties There would have been trouble if editors had been obliged to walk. An organization had already been formed to have a bill passed compelling railroads to place their ties the same distance apart, and to put a rubher s'air-pad on each tie. This would bave cost the railroads a great deal of mon ey, but the editors would have been reientless and insisted on the improvement. If he coutinues to completion his canvass of the State as he inaugurated it yesterday, he cannot but make a powerful impression on the awakening people of the Commonwealth." This discription of a hanging is from a New Z aland paper and shows that they do such things better than we: The condemn ed men walked up the ladder to the platform with a firm tread, but without the elightest bravado. They were calm and apparently quite har juy, and just before the white caps were drawn over their faces they leaned forward and ki-sed eschother. Hill engaged in prayer on the ecufloid, and as he concluded suddenly the drop fell and the startling simultaneous thud of both ropes, which had a drop of eight feet, elec trified those present, and all was over There was not the alightest vibration of either rope, and, with a feeling of satisfaction all present saw that death in each instance had been instantaneous.

-Farmers are not particularly jubilant over the late opening of spring and seem disposed to vote agriculture a delusion. In fact since the unfolding of the hurled tress. ures of Birmingham, the astonishing capa bilitles of Chattanooga and the gaseous possibilities of Harrod-burg, Junction City and the Hanging Fork, it is a settled question that our pledding ancestors "walked in darkness all the days of their pilgrim age." Unfortunately there are still a few who obstinately adhere to old notions and there is still a suspicion that the production of the vulgar appliances of food and raiment will still be adnered to, at least to a limited extent. In fact the desire to get aliaing the whole of this great nation. Our grandest possession is a fruitful soil and a passably genial climate; and our natural and appointed mission is to cherish the one and utilize the other. There is more sound philosophy in the old maxlm, "Make hay while the sun shines," than in whole volumes of modern science. The present rage for boring and tunneling smid the buried niveteries of this ancient earth. changing its formation, consuming its elements and destroying its equilibrium, with yet have its history, provided there is any body left to write that history. There is an old centence recorded against the race, a matter of come six thousand years ago, "Dust thou art and unto dust thou shalt return," which has been verifial in every hour of our history. Practically and literally the same dictum is stamped upon speculative fortunes. Multitudes of comfortable estates won by patient toil and prudent painstaking are continually converted into cash, embarked in adventure, and fost in the bursting of the glittering bubble. But breakfast is ready!

IN MEMORIAM.

-At the last meeting of the McElroy Gleaners the following was spread on the minutee:

With the deepest sorrow we record the act that since our last meeting the names of Lettie Mckinney and Belle Bourne, members of this mission, have been stricken from our roll by the Angel of Death. Yet that sorrow is greatly alleviated by the consciousness that their names have only been eraced here to be recorded in the Lamb's Book of Life; that the Master, in whose service they had begun so sarly to labor, has called them to His presence in he morn of their existence, and spared them the trials, temptations and viscissitudes of a lifetime. All know that our ioes is their gain, yet it is hard to give them up. E-pecially is the effliction severs since the two huds that gave promise of making the fairest thewers have been plucked so near together. While still suffering from the agony caused by the shock of the first summons, we are called upon to mourn for the second. Women in Music. Much has been written lately regarding the reason why there are no great female composers. There can be no doubt that, in other arts besides music, women have achieved but little that can lay claim to immortal fame Perhaps the principal reason of this is that their affections are too exclusively personal. A girl will assiduously practice on the plano as long as that will assist her lu fascinating her suitors. But how many women outside the runks of teachers continue their practice after marriage from the impersonal love of music itself! Needless to say they have no tline; for every hour devoted to emotional refreshment strengthens the nerves for two hours of extra labor. No doubt there is something comic in the ardent affection with which a professor hugs his pet theory regarding the Greek native, or the origin of honey in flowers, and in the ferocity with which he will defend it against his friends, if they happen to oppose it. But such complete devotion to abstract theories is absolutely necessary to the discovery of original ideas; and, as women are rarely able or willing to emerge from the haunts of personal emotion, this explains why they have achieved greatness in hardly any art hut novel writing, which is chiefly concerned with personal emotions. Among great performers, on the other hand, there are as many talented women as meu, if not more. But it is a curlous fact that even the lest lady planiste seldom learn to improvise in an interesting manner. A maliclous bachelor has suggested that if, in teaching harmony, the chords were made personal by calling them "Charlie" and "William" instead of "tonic" and "dominant," women would soon learn to improvise charmingly. - American Musician.

Draw the shape of your child's stocking on a piece of paper; then have this shape cut from a half inch board, pluned and nicely rounded and smoothed off at the edges. Bore a hole in the top and put in a loop of string. Stretch the children's washed stockings, while wet, over this form, and hang by the loop in some warm place to dry. "What on the living earth do you mean?" "Just what I say-a burglar in your house on Colton Hill, and talking with you here at the telephone. You are necessarily excited by this information, but try to compose your self," the squeaking voice went on.

"Great heavens! Compose myself! You infamous scoundrel, what are you doing in "Precisely what I have said, Mr. Bradley, I'm a professional burglar-I really hope you will take this quietly. It will be to your advantage, you know; I will show you that." "I shall take it quietly, you poor sinner, by starting a squad of police up the hill after you in less than ten minutes. Say your prayers for strong legs, for you will need them more than you ever did before."

"You cannot do it, sir. Listen to me and I will show you that I know all about the situation. In the tirst place, your house is the only one on this hill, except Mr. Boyd's, immediately across the street, and he is away in the country for the summer. In the second place, the nearest inhabited house is half a mile distant, at the foot of the hill, and the nearest telephone except the one in your neighbor Boyd's is at Winchester, five miles off. Now, I know you might ring up the Winches ter telephane, but it is a long way off, and besides, there ... no squad of policemen there. "You need not be at the trouble of answering; I will go right through with the facts of the case. As I say, the 30th of every month you go out to the mills. Well, the 30th came yesterday; but you missed the Loweli express, which you usually take, and you had to postpone your trip natil to-day. So you took the local train instead and you came out to Colton Hill, bringing the money home with you. Then in the evening, when sitting at supper, you told your wife that you disliked carrying the greenbacks so much about and that you would leave them in the house until this afternoon, when you would call for them on the way to the mills. Have I been

"Possibly; but I must tell you that the money is not there. It will be a great disappointment to you, but I brought it into the office this morning."

"Well, well, I will try to Lear it. But listen to the rest of my tale. After supper you appeared to hide those greenbacks in some place upstalrs, and this morning, for some reason, when you started for Boston with your wife, you did not have the bundle which you brought home with you yesterday. How am I to understand that?'

"Hy the use of your reasoning faculty There are many ways of carrying money." "What comes next is an alternative. The burning of your house, Mr. Bradley, seems quite needless, as well as disadvantageous to us both. Here is the case: On the one hand, if you refuse to give up the money, and compel me to burn the house, you'll lose both the house and the money. On the other hand, if you sensibly tell me where the greenbacks are hidden, you will lose the money, it is true, hut you will save the house. In either case, the money is lost; you cannot save your employer's funds, whatever you do, and you have simply to put that question aside. Well, put it aside. It now only remains for you to decide whether you will save your house or lose it, and I offer you that alternative. Does it appear a very difficult question to decide upon!" "Smith, you were made for a logician, not a burgiar. Your statement of the case quite resembles a lawyer's brief, and before you go any further I should like to ask you, if I may, whether your occupation has nlwnys been what it is at present, for you do not talk like an-an"--

"An outlaw?" "Yes, that's it-in plain language. What is it that has brought you to the pass of piling up kindling wood in other people's houses, und threatening them with conflagration after a thirty minutes' statement of alterna-tlves!" "A sense of humor. Did the absurdity of the world and its conventions never strike you! I was born with an unusual dose of that." "But there is imprisonment for life, and such little matters." "That strikes me as humorous too. Think of the concelt of locking a person up for life! Of course it is a justifiable hardship, but just think of the vistness of conceit implied in one man's walking up to another and clapping him into prison for all his born days.

Merely as vastness of conceit it is very humorous. This is a ridiculous bubble of a world."

"It is a ridiculous bubble of a world; only I fear you underestimate the disadvantages of laughing on the wrong side." "It seems to be safe at present. Are you not going to answer my alternative?" "Yes-the alternative; I was forgetting it. Tho trouble with that alternative, Smith, is that my mind sees another. As you say, the burning of the house seems entirely needless and disadvantageous to us both, but I should put It on different grounds. You assume that the money is out there, but I assume that it Is in here. Here, then, is my case. On the one hand, if you insist on burning the house, you do not get the money, and you make yourself guilty of the crime of arson; on the other hand, if you sensibly go awny with empty pockets, you leave the house for me, and are a guiltless man. In neither case can you have the money, for it is in here, and you have simply to put that question aside. Let us suppose you have put it aside. It now but remains for you to decide whether you will voluntarily make yourself linkle for arson. What could be simpler!"

"Your argument is all sophistry-hollow sophistry. "So bad as that!" "Yes; and I will tell you the little fact that will prove it. It is that I am becoming an impatient man, and have, in fact, just taken a bunch of matches out of my pocket." "Then you really intend to do it!" "The matches I tell you, are in my hand." "Don't take that fatal step quite yet; there is a question I want to ask you. You remember my inquiring for some evidence that you really were in mry house! Now how do you know that I am in my office?" "I do not care whether you are or not." "That seems to me a rather careless opin on. Here we are, Smith, talking over this burgiary, and while I know exactly where you are, you have not the remotest idea where I anr. Now suppose I am in Boyd's house, phone there. "Yes, and suppose you are not." "But I am. Here, in fact, we are talking with each other at a distance of lifty yards, instead of many miles, as you have sup-across the street from you; there is a tele-posed." "It is a likely atory!"

"Oh, of course your are incredulous; but listen and I will explain it to you. Under stand, in the tirst place, that I do not carry large packages of money about with me without keeping my eyes open. I have known for several weeks that I was being followed by some one, and my employers have there fore set a wntch, so that while you were waiting for me to trip we were wniting for you to do the same. Yesterday afternoon the fatal hour came; you were discovered we arranged during the night that I should watch to-day in Boyd's house with two policemen. It was to have been a busy day in the city and I could ill spare myself from the nll calls for me out here to Boyd's, and to this precaution I owe our conversation, which certainly has been a very extraordinary one. Unfortunately I cannot offer you an alternative, Mr. Smith; I must come over with ar officer right away and carry you off to the

"I believe it is ali a weak fable,"

"Will you look across the street!" even more direct communication with the enjoyed. Here I am, as you see, and here is A. Lincoln. the policeman."

Yes, we are all very much present. It rerembles a scene in the pantonime." "All if it only were pantonime! So niry that pile of kindling wood isl I think 1 thoubl like to get it off the carpet." "That! Oh, that was an invention of mine.

"And so you did not intend to burn the house after all?" "l'erhaps not. At all events, I shull not do it now." "I am inclined to wish, for your sake, that the whole affair were an invention. You have made a bad bargain with destiny, 1

Grant Never Porgot His Friends.

Gen. Grant in his youth was inclined to the use of intexienting liquors. When staoccasions he was so overcome that a friend wrote to one of the Methodist pastors and asked him to do what he could to save the young man. The pastor called upon Lieut. Grant, and stated what he had heard. He was treated with the greatest courtesy, and tobl that whife he liked to slrink a glass of wine, he was not aware that his habits had attracted attention, und if they had be would instantly curb lumself. He took a pew in the church, and made a decided change in his habits.

Many years after, when the civil war had begin, progressed, ended, and Gen. Grant was president of the United States, in some way his thoughts were directed to the minis ter who had been of such service to him. He inquired into his situation; found him in somewhat broken health, unable to perform the duties of the ministry, but still with clear mind canable of doing useful work. He promptly gave him a situation in one of the departments, where, with a moderate salary which he was able to earn, be remained for some years, and where in 1876 we had the above account in substance from his own lips.—Christian Advocate.

A Collector in a Tenement.

I was last week up in Seventy-lirst street. to collect in a tenement. I noticed already on entering that the sewer gas was frightful, and it takes a good deal to knock a collector out. A woman in scant clothing opened the door and asked to have the payment postponed. She couldn't spare any money, as her baby had died and now came the funeral expenses. I locked around, but couldn't see any coffin; doubting her story, I therefore asked: "Where's your dead baby, madainf" She went over to a chair and removing a shawl I saw the poor baby sitting dead in the chair with her hands clinched. The sight was enough for me. I asked if there was much sickness in the house and learned that it really came nearer to being an epidemic ward than n llt home for the working people of this community.-New York Journal.

STORY OF LINCOLN.

TOLD BY EX-REPRESENTATIVE BRAN- IE. H. FOX, CHESAPEAKE & OHIO ROUTE

A Gun Maker's Claims-An Interview With the President-Lincoln's Personal Document-Admiral Dahlgren.

I first saw Mr. Lincoln in the summer of 1863. I had been elected in the spring of that year to the Thirty-eighth congress, and visit ed Washington some time in June to look up quarters for the coming December session The corridors of Willard's hotel were crowded with officers on leave, office seekers, con tractors and jobbers-the swarm which always gathers around the hive of the treasury. The most conspicuous figure, and one of the most remarkable I ever saw, was Horatle Ames, an iron founder of Falls Village, Conn., a brother of Oakes Ames, He clnimed to have invented a process of forging wrought iron cannon of heavy calibre, by subjecting the molten metal to the impact of two immense trip hummers, which with characteristic grhn humor he had named respectively "Thor" and "tidin." Aiues complained that though his guns had been subjected to unfair tests by Dahlgren, who was then chief of the ordnance bureau, and though it had withstood all attempts to burst it-while the Dahlgren gum had burst like glass bottles-yet he could neither get n report in his favor nor nu nutlientis record of the experiments. Ames soon discovered that I was one of the newly elected t'onnecticut members, and insisted that in the absence of his own immediate representative I was my duty to present his up; eal to President Lincoln. I did not "hanker after the job," to use one of the expressive planses of Mr. Lincoln. Hut Ames was not the man to stand upon efiquetio and I finally yielded to his importunity, on condition that an interview should be arranged with Mr. Lincoln's ap-

Every one knows the general appearance of Mr. Lincoln. That he was tall, swarthy, nwkward and unconventional in dress and innuner are the broad outlines of any conception of him. But no one who has not stood face to face with the man can ever realize a lifelike blen of the great original. As he rose-nod seemed to keep on rising-before me, his hair was black, coarse and of an unkempt appearance, his nose prominent, his cheek bones high, his cheeks very hollow, lds complexion swirthy, his manner gracious but subdued, while his eyes had an expression that I that myself incapable of describing, as though they bry in ambush in their deep enverns, ready to saring forth or retreat further looking through my window and then we within, as occasion required. He was awkknew what to expect to-day. Accordingly | ward, but it was the awkwardness of nature, which is akin to grace. The expression of his face was carnest, with ir shade of sadness, and his voice was seft and at tame as tender as a woman's.

office, but I told the telephone clerk to send | I had prepared what I thought a neat little speech of introduction, but he at once put my rketoric and embarrassment to thight by taking me by the hand and saying, "Well, what does little Connecticut want?"

The tone, the familiar address, the friendly manner, the gracious smile at once put me at city. But you believe I am here now, do you uny ease, and I stated my case as to a friend, and almost an equal. Mr. Lincoln listened with evident interest. Ames lad stated that a record existed of the various charges, the At this point Sunth openal the blind beside number of tirings and the respective results the telephone at which he had been talking to each gun, and that it would vimilente all and was not a little astonished to see Itradley he claimed, but he had been denied access to eave the opposite house and cross the street it. Mr. Lincoln closed the interview by rein the company of a very competent looking | questing me to procure it and bring it to him policeman. In a few moments they were nt at 8 o'clock that evening. And to my sug his side, and Bradley was saving, after a look gestion that I was unknown at the department at the langlar's undismayed countenance; he took an executive exvelope from a bundle "You now have an epportunity, Smith, for which lay always on his table and wrote the following: "Let Mr. -- , of t'empetleut, owner of this Louse than you have heretofore, have a copy of such record as he indicates,

Armed with this concise but persuasive executive message, we visited the navy department, where we waited in the auteroom for more than two hours for the arrival of and ingenious a spirit as yours-but I will Commodere Dahlgren, who was said to be not waste words. Will you tell me where absent. Suspecting after a while that Dahl gren's absence was rather conventional than actual, we at last pushed by the janitor into the chief's room, where we found him calmly writing at his desk, where he had probably beer from the commencement. My request for a copy of the report was cartly refused, until 1 produced the envelope with the numistakable sign manual of the president, causing as much prensternation as though one of Dahlgren's own guns had burst in in his own department. We got what we wanted and took it to the president that evening according to appointment.

Mr. Lincoln sat at un office desk, under which his long legs protruded to an extent which made them conspicuous. At first he had on a pair of carpet slippers, but as the conversation progressed he unconsciously withdrew his feet, disclosing what seemed to be a pair of dark yarn stockings, through which had worked tos great toe, and this be kept in almost perpetual motion. The record verified the claim of Mr. Ames, and after much discussion and searching questions Mr. Lincoln took an executive envelope and wrote the following: "If Herntio Ames will umke ten wrought iron guns after his method, which will maswer satisfactorily such tests as I shall order, I will see that he gets paid $1 per pound for each gun A. Lincoln.

Thus ended my first interview, I never saw Ames afterward, but was told by Cakes Ames, his brother, that the guns were made unswered all tests, and that his irother received $100,000 on the strength of that envelope -Angustus Brandegeo in New York

London Reportorial Enterprise.

The London Times has not often of late distinguished itself by enterprise in getting news, but there is no doubt of its power to keep a bit or intelligence away from its rivals. Lord Randolph Churchill's resignation, nunounced exclusively by "The Thumlerer," is a late example. The young statesman drove Into Printing House square shortly after 11 o'clock at night and asked to see the editor. He was lodged with him for nearly an hour, nt the end of which time, lo! as Mr. Illack says in his novels, a strange thing happened. As soon as Lord Randolph had been seen off the premises an order was issued to lock overy door, back and front, and take the keys to the editor's room. Dispatches, as they nrrived through the night, were taken in at a window in the courtyard. Not a soul, from the editor to the printer's devil, was permitted to leave the premises on any pretext whatever. For some hours mystery and consternation brooded over the establishment. The secret was till 2 o'clock in the morning locked in the breasts of the editor and two leader writers. The paragraph announcing the resignation, and the articles commenting thereon, were written and held back to the last moment. But even then, the hour being one at which other papers had gone to press the doors were still locked, and it was not till the paper had gone to press that the doors were unlocked .- New York Tribune.
